Featured NIGELLA EXPRESS Print me It is often decreed that the only ingredients (besides eggs of course) of a Spanish omelette are onions and potatoes, but I like a touch of red from some chopped peppers. I'm sorry if this offends â and not just the Spaniards â but you could speed up the process by using fresh, drained and canned potatoes instead of cooking real ones. This is quite easy to do, but you need to do it in advance as the hottest you want to eat this is at room temperature. For US Cup measurements, use the knob at the top of the ingredient list. Photo by Lis Parsons Serves: 4 or more, depending on what you eat with 225 grams of baby novel potatoes (half) 4 large eggs 75 grams drained and chopped grilled peppers or roasted over the fire from a jar 3 onions (finely cut) 75 grams of grated manchego or cheese C heddar 1 teaspoon butter drop of oil salt (at will) black pepper (at will) 8 ounces baby white potatoes (at half) 4 eggs is 2 cup drained and chopped peppers grilled or roasted over fire from a jar 3 shallots (thin slices) 3â4 cup grated Manchego cheese or Cheddar cheese 1 teaspoon butter drop salt oil (to taste) black pepper (to taste) Turn on the grill and let it warm as you start the omelette. Cook the new potatoes in boiling water for 15 minutes, until cooked, then drain. Beat the eggs in a bowl, add the peppers, onions and cheese, salt and pepper, then add the cooked and drained potatoes. Heat the butter and oil in a small, heavy-frying pan and, when hot, pour in the omelet mixture and cook gently for 5 minutes. At this point, put the bottom of the omelet and, instead of turning it, put the pan under the grill for a few minutes to adjust the superior. Turn the omelet overturned on a plate to let cool. Don't worry if you feel a bit shaky in the middle, because it will continue to cook while it cools. Once cooled, cut into 4 large or 8 small wedges.
