

Text free for android

Continue

You don't switch away from your PC to your smartphone to reply to an email or an instant message, so why should a simple SMS message be any different? Thankfully, if you have an Android device, you can continue using your PC (and its full-size spacious keyboard) to read and send text messages. Our choice for this task: MightyText. MightyText Platform: Android, Web, Chrome Price: Free ($4.99/month Pro) Download Page Features Syncs SMS and MMS on Android phone and Web Stores messages up to 6 months for free (forever for Pro users) Syncs contacts from phone Syncs photos and videos from your phone's gallery, with editing and filters Add media from preloaded gallery of popular GIFs, videos, memes, emojis and quotes Favorite texts Default list view, grid-based power view for multiple conversations Battery indicator Notifications for incoming calls Dial a number from the web (needs phone to talk) Ring your phone to find it Chrome extension to send messages from Gmail and Facebook chat windows Schedule text messages to send later (pro only) Save message templates (pro only) Create contact lists for easy group messages (pro only) Send messages to 25 people at a time (pro only) Add signatures (pro only) Block certain numbers from syncing with MightyText (pro only) 11 additional themes (pro only) Where It Excels Of all the different PC text messaging solutions for Android, MightyText is the easiest to use. Install it on your Android, sign into Gmail, fire up the webapp and you are ready to go. The app hooks you with the "it just works" charm and then unloads some handy extra features to keep you happy. The big seller is how effortlessly it syncs your text messages, whether you are connected on Wi-Fi or using a data plan. The Power View makes it easy to carry out multiple text conversations simultaneously. Plus, if you use the Chrome extension, it will give you pop-ups when you are in your Gmail or Facebook tabs, much like how an incoming chat message looks in those windows. And you can compose new messages too. The Pro version ($39.99/year or $4.99/month) takes it up a notch with the ability to schedule messages and save templates—both useful features that are worth the money if you text a lot. Where It Falls Short Search. That's the biggie missing in MightyText and there doesn't seem to be a good explanation why you can't search through all your text messages, even though they are right there. It's not even available in the Pro version. The preloaded gallery of GIFs, videos and more is limited, and there doesn't seem to be a way to add your own to it, but we're not too broken up about that. MightyText also has some issues with MMS on Android phones that aren't using the stock messaging app, so if you are using a text messaging replacement for Android, you may have to switch it off from "default" to solve the problem (at least, according to the MightyText FAQ). G/O Media may get a commission. It's been a while since we last looked at Android text messaging replacements. Our previous... Read more The Competition If searching through your text messages is important to you, then AirDroid—which is a complete Android-to-PC control solution (not just texting)—is your best option. One of the main features of remote controlling your Android through the Web is robust text messaging support as it indexes all your messages and carries out quick searches. However, MMS support on AirDroid is weak in both sending and receiving files, especially if you are messaging to a non-Android phone. In our tests, MMS messages sent to an iPhone and a BlackBerry didn't go through at all, and the BlackBerry's MMS didn't come through either. Android: We mentioned AirDroid 2's public beta a few months ago, but the new version is finally... Read more A popular second option is DeskSMS, but there doesn't seem to be much reason to consider it, especially considering it requires an annual $5 subscription. Both MightyText and AirDroid are better options, but it does have one thing going for it: integration with Google Talk/Hangouts. Plus, it's got a nifty tablet app called TabletSMS that basically lets you handle text messages on an Android tablet. And, obviously, one of the best alternatives for text messaging from your PC is to use Google Voice. However, while Google Voice can do a lot of other things—like forward calls, integrate with Gmail for VOIP, and other stuff like that—its texting features are pretty mundane. Google Voice doesn't support MMS (except on Sprint), its texting has a lot of weird bugs (like splitting up messages and showing them out of order), and overall just isn't that special. If you want to use MightyText but still get the other features of Google voice, there are other ways to get those features. Google hasn't updated Voice in ages. Once heralded as the amazing service that would unify our... Read more Lifehacker's App Directory is a new and growing directory of recommendations for the best applications and tools in a number of given categories. Google has announced it's going forward with a new way to text on an Android phone, swapping out the default Messenger app for a new texting app (opens in new tab) called Android Messages. Besides the (ever so slight) name change, the switch to Android Messages promises to bring a smarter texting experience by adding Rich Communications Services, or RCS, features to the app. Specifically, enabling RCS on Android Messages allows features like group chat, high-resolution image sharing, and those little "Read" tags that let you know someone's seen your message. This would allow Android Messages to work more on par with the likes of WhatsApp, Facebook Messenger and Apple's own Messages service (to an extent), which have quickly become the go-tos for mobile messaging due to a wider set of features. More features, more problems. Though more features should be seen as a nearly unanimously good thing for Android owners, the switch to an RCS-enabled texting platform could come with its share of setbacks. First, the format is still in its relative infancy compared to the likes of SMS and MMS, the traditional venues for basic text and picture messaging, respectively. Despite 27 different providers and device manufacturers - to include Sprint, Deutsche Telekom, Rogers, and Globe - joining in on Google's RCS efforts, big names like Verizon, T-Mobile and AT&T were conspicuously missing from Google's news announcement. This is likely because, as noted by Android Police (opens in new tab), these larger service providers have their own take on RCS messaging services that could be seen as stepping on Google's toes, or vice versa. Additionally, concerns have arisen about how adding "smart" features to texting - especially on a platform like Android - could be seen as a possible security hazard, according to Recode (opens in new tab). It will take some time to see how Android Messages pans out for telecom companies and customers alike, though those running an Android phone from almost every major manufacturer - ranging from HTC to Motorola to LG to even Google's Pixel - will be capable of preloading the new app starting today. Here are the 10 best secure messaging apps around. Even with the rise of online messengers that you can use to chat with someone for free, sending a text message remains one of the fastest ways to reach someone on their phone. What if the text you want to send isn't urgent, and you intentionally want to postpone sending it? What if you don't want to forget wishing someone a happy birthday the next day or need to reach someone in a different time zone and don't want to wake them up with a text? On Android, there are several ways to schedule a text message to be sent at a later time or date. Learn how to use your native Messages app, Google Messages, or a third-party app to schedule a text message to be sent in the future. How to Schedule a Text Message on Android in Your Native Messages App So you wrote a text but decided to send it another time. The good news is, you can schedule and send your message later, no matter what Android device you have. However, depending on your model, you'll either need to use a third-party app to do it or not. For example, if you have a Samsung phone, you can use your native Messages app called Samsung Messages to schedule your texts. To do that, follow the steps below. Open the Samsung Messages app, find the contact you want to message, and write down your text. Select the arrow icon on the left side of the text, then select the plus icon to reveal additional options. From the options, select Schedule message. Choose the time and date when you want your message to be sent. Select Done to confirm. To finish scheduling your message, select Send. How to Schedule a Text Message Using Google Messages On many models of Android smartphones, Google Messages is the native Messages app. If that's the case, scheduling text messages on Android becomes even easier. To schedule a text message in Google Messages, follow the steps below. Open Google Messages and type your text. Hold down the Send button until the Scheduled send option appears and select it. Pick a date and time when you want the text to be sent. Select Send to confirm. The button will now display a little clock icon that means your message is scheduled. What to Do if You Can't Schedule a Text in Google Messages If you opened your native Messages app and didn't find the Scheduled send option, it could mean one of the two things. Your native Messages app is different from Google Messages, in which case you can simply download and install Google Messages to make it work. Alternatively, the feature may not have rolled out for you yet. You can either wait for the update to reach you or find Google Messages on the Play Store and join the beta program on the product page. The beta version of the app will include the feature. Use Third-Party Apps to Schedule a Text Message on Android You can also use a third-party app to be able to schedule your text messages as well as use other workarounds. Use Pulse SMS to Postpone Your Text Messages If you don't like using Google Messages, Pulse SMS is a good alternative. The Pulse SMS logo even looks similar to that of Google Messages. Naturally, the process of scheduling a text in Pulse SMS mimics Google Messages too. After you download and install the app, open it and select the plus icon in the bottom-right corner of the app. Choose the contact that you want to send a text to. Then, hold down the Send button on the right until you see the option to schedule the text. Select the date and time when you want your message sent and select OK. Write down your message and select Save. Pulse SMS will send it on a day and time that you chose. Schedule Your Texts Using Do It Later Do It Later sounds like an app for procrastination, but it's an app for automating your messages. Aside from scheduling your emails and text messages to be sent later, Do It Later allows you to automatically reply to calls, texts, WhatsApp messages, and even emails. To schedule a text in Do It Later, open the app, select the plus icon in the bottom-right corner of your screen, then choose Message. Next, add the recipient, write down your message and select when you want the app to send it. To confirm, select the tick icon in the upper-right corner of the screen. Do It Later will take care of the rest for you. Write Down Now, Send Later Writing down a thought when it crosses your mind always helps to remember it later. The same is true for text messages. So write down your message the minute you think about it, and if it doesn't seem like the right time to send it, schedule it to be sent later. Do you schedule your texts on Android? Which app do you use for it? Share your experience with postponing texts in the comments section below.
