Whether you're discussing a super busy schedule that makes it challenging to meet new people or you just prefer to get all the potentially uncomfortable conversations first off the road in a format with much less pressure, you may find that starting from finding a real life online partner holds a lot of appeal. Online connection options are plentiful and diverse. Some sites use elaborate technology to match your personality and preferences with other individuals, while others have a simpler approach that requires a little more practical effort from users. If you are interested in giving online dating a try, many of the sites offer free trials, although some features may be quite limited without a paid subscription. Let's take a look at what some of the best sites have to offer. Match.com is the oldest big dating site that is still up and running. Launched in April 1995, it is a source of long-term and short-term relationships. According to research conducted by incontriadvice.com, the site has an overall rating of 4.9/5.0, with the highest signs in popularity, ease of use and features. Since its inception, Match.com has gained a respected international reputation and operates in 28 countries and 38 languages. Among the over 15 million active users, the gender ratio is also close to 49% men to 51% women, and the site caters to both heterosexual and LGBTQ singles. Photo Courtesy: Andrew Harrer/Bloomberg/Getty Images A full profile takes about 30 minutes to complete, although registration through a social media account can speed up the process. A paid subscription gives you access to seven daily games based on the potential compatibility of your profile. Plus, you always have access to common games to view mutually compatible profiles and reverse matches to view profiles of people looking for someone like you. You can also view your history of likes, favorable reviews and winks and read your inbox messages. As a very nice extra perk, you get a free six-month subscription if you don't find a game within the first six months. The price varies depending on the time period selected, and the site navigation has a simple layout. eHarmony started in the year 2000 and has taken the thriving online dating world by storm with its use of psychological and scientific attraction approaches that has considered skills, temperaments, goals and personality traits in its matching algorithms. Two decades later, the site focuses exclusively on heterosexual men and women age over 18 who are interested in long-term relationships and contributes to about 2% of new marriages in the United States. The ratio of men to women on the site is 48% to 52%, and the overall rating is 4.7/5.0, with the security gaining the highest individual rating. Photo courtesy: Ted Ted Setup Images for the site takes a little longer due to the comprehensive personality assessment that evaluates dealbreakers and likes. You will only see the profiles you consider compatible, and you can then filter them by city or age. If you're still nervous about first contact, even in an online environment, the site provides pre-written appetizers to help you break the ice. eHarmony is available in over 190 countries and is easy to navigate. It doesn't offer Match.com's free six-month extension for not matching, but it does offer a free three-month extension if you're not satisfied with your first three-month subscription. Monthly prices vary depending on the subscription period you choose. Now a popular user-friendly online dating platform, Zoosk started in 2007 as a Facebook app. The goal at the time was to provide young people with a platform to find occasional, long-term relationships. To achieve this, the site provides individuals with in-depth dating and communication tools. It has an overall rating of 4.7/5.0, with features, ease of use and value earning the highest ratings. Like the Harmony, it has a male/female ratio of between 48% and 52%, but these numbers come from a much larger user base of over 40 million users in more than 80 countries. Photo Courtesy: @Zoosk/Twitter The platform uses behavioral matching to connect potential partners and targets both heterosexual and LGBT singles. Searches can be filtered by age, location and religion, as well as physical characteristics such as body type and height. Zoosk's built-in SmartPick feature also provides tips based on user behaviour on the site. The site allows you to see users online and write auto-reply messages for simplicity. You can send likes or smiles for free, but you need a subscription to read or send messages. Subscription prices vary depending on the duration of the subscription. With an overall rating of 4.4/5.0, ChristianMingle.com is well known as a trusted site for single Christian to find dating and long-term relationships. The site was first opened in 1997 as a Christian alternative to some of the dating sites that were popular at the time. It has been estimated that the site is responsible for about 29% of all Christian marriages between couples who have met online. The user base is made up of over 16 million Christians worldwide of different faiths and beliefs. Photo Courtesy: @christianmingle/Twitter The site is aimed at singles of any sexual orientation, but is not open to those who identify themselves as non-religious. Select various preferences when creating your profile, including details about your religion and the relationship you have looking, as well as the details you want in a partner to ensure that the site matches you with compatible profiles. Free registration includes a limited number of features. The premium subscription has several price points, depending on the period, the site premierdating app launched in 2016.
