Bangkok is a city that thrives on contrasts and embraces the weird, the wonderful, and the whacky. Its happy essence and vibrant nature is owed to the everyday hustle and daily grind of the people. A place like no other, enriched with culture and many delights that go way beyond a plate of Pad Thai. This city is a must see and an experience to remember any time you visit. From the casual tuk-tuk, market stalls, trendy skyscrapers and delicious food, the city harnesses a plethora of appeal. With many popular neighborhoods to explore and plenty of traditional, world class foods to try. Whatever you're here for, this is a destination that delivers romance, adventure, and family time. In an unreservedly soulful city, you can expect nothing less. It is without a doubt an oriental heavyweight, beloved for the pulsating Soi's, nightlife, food, and spa's. And, contrary to common belief, this 'big smoke' has plenty of greenery at its fingertips for those wanting a break from the noise. And just for good measure, the views in Bangkok are not to be missed, offering unrivalled seclusion from the concrete jungle. Climb the Sky Bars at night and be rewarded with a sparkling metropolis twinkling in its glory. Sashaying with the sweet, the sour, and everything in between, there is no denying that the Land of Smiles will capture your senses and your heart. Indochina Time (ICT) Thai Buddhist New Year (otherwise known as 'Songkran') is a celebration the locals (of all ages) eagerly await all year round. On April 13, this metropolitan city shuts down for a three-day holiday. The locals then proceed to the streets, to have what can only be described as the biggest water festival in the world! If the thought of this screams adventure to you, then don't forget to pack your brightest flash shirt and your best water gun! Check out Bangkok's Silom, a neighborhood where the atmosphere is pumping, the roads are closed off and the water barrels are lining the streets. The easiest way to get there is by hopping on the BTS Skytrain (Silom or dark green line) and following the herds of brightly patterned shirts. Upon exiting the station, you will be greeted with some friendly, splash'n' fun. If having water thrown on you randomly in the street isn't really your thing, then avoiding most parts of this country, at this time of year, is probably a good idea! FYI: This time of year is HOT, HOT, HOT. In fact, April is known for being the hottest month of the year, so if you are averse to strong heat and humidity do check out the cooler months of the year. Throughout the months of January and February, Bangkok proudly presents the very chilled Concert in the Park. Starting at 5:30 p.m. every Sunday, the Bangkok Symphony Orchestra plays a two-hour set, consisting of stunning compositions from both Thai and Western music. You can expect to hear plenty of popular classics from the big movies, musicals, and pop band heroes. Do as the locals do by taking a blanket or folding chairs, plus your favourite picnic essentials. You'll be ready to settle in and soak up the atmosphere. November to February are generally the cooler months in most parts of Thailand, including Bangkok. However, if you're planning a trip to the islands from the capital do check the weather carefully. Whilst some areas of northern Thailand are determined by the three distinct climates, there are southern regions governed by just two. These areas are known for getting more rainfall. Bangkok is a huge bustling city with a population of over 10 million and its bold colours and cool vibrations span over 50 districts making it impossible to absorb it all in a single trip. With so much to see and do, this is a city that loves an itinerary. It's also a city that loves wandering feet — being ready to trail off the beaten path and throw away the schedule could pay off in dividends. Bangkok Soi's (streets/alleys) are well known for their hidden gems. Some have more pop-ups than a pogo stick, so being prepared to go with the flow could full-well deliver the magic you never expected. Get used to the idea of using the BTS Skytrain and the MRT rail lines, otherwise getting anywhere fast will likely be a stickler for your trip. Traffic can be a deadlock, especially at peak times of the day. Planning your mode of transport ahead of time could be the key to unlocking extra time in a mind-blowing city. The city is a food haven for anyone who loves exotic, hearty, and flavorsome cooking. With so much to try, do your palate a favour and start off with the following favourites: Khao Soi, Pad Thai, Som Tam, Massaman Curry, Laab, Pak Boong, and Penang Curry. And there's plenty more where they came from. With a mix of unique textures, flavors, and cultural influences, don't be surprised if you fall in love with authentic Thai cuisine. The Thai people generally pride themselves on being respectful and polite, with this you can expect to be greeted with the Wai (palms together at your chest accompanied with a subtle bow of the head) — reciprocate to share the warm sentiment. It is illegal to defame or insult the King or any members of the royal family. To avoid any misunderstanding, steer clear of any mention of his royal highness. Calling Code: +66 Capital City: Bangkok Bangkok is brimming with transport options and choosing the right mode that is fit for your journey is vital. Trains: The BTS Skytrain is most likely the most convenient way to reach your destination in the shortest time possible. There are sixty-one stations along three main lines, and it's extending every day. This mode of transport is cheaper than taxis and covers all the major Bangkok neighborhoods. Sukhumvit and Silom being the most popular lines for locals and tourists alike. With waiting times averaging less than five minutes, you can hop on this friendly service and know that you'll experience the convenience of time, as well as air conditioned and clean carriages. Be prepared to be 'packed in' during peak times. Have cash available to buy instant tickets from the machines or take your passport to purchase a Rabbit Card for regular Skytrain use. Your journey will start from around $0.45 for one stop. If you know you'll be making good use of the service, take your passport and buy a rabbit card. Sticking $10 on it should have you covered for a while, and you can top up anytime. The best part is claiming back the cost of the card (and what you didn't spend) at the end of your trip is easy. Just return it to any Skytrain kiosk. The MRT is Bangkok's rapid underground rail system. Like the Skytrain, the MRT has a quick turnaround and covers vast areas of Bangkok, including the old quarters. Take cash to exchange for tokens or cards. Both BTS and the MRT are interconnected at popular stations for seamless overlaps in city travel. Taxis: Bangkok taxis are everywhere and come in an array of funky colours, adding a wash of blue, orange, pink, green, and yellow to an already vivacious bustling scene. Even though flagging a cab down is relatively easy, depending on the time of day, a 10-minute journey may end up taking an hour or so. Traffic is relentlessly jammed pretty much everywhere you go, especially during peak times. It's also worth noting that some drivers may not have the meter on when you get in, this happens a lot in tourist areas. Be sure to check and ask for "Meter kah/khap?" before you hop in. Generally, it's very normal for a driver to communicate with you via the passenger window before locking the doors and letting you in. Having maps open and your address programmed for easy view can speed up the process. Paying: Carrying loose coins and small notes is a good way to avoid being (unintentionally) short changed. Some drivers may claim they don't have small coins/notes to give back to you. When you come to pay, round up your fare to the nearest five or 10 baht, this can also make the transaction easier for both parties. Motorcycle Taxis: A popular (and fun) way to travel for short distances, particularly from train stations. The bikes can get into the nooks and crannies of the Soi's and easily duck and dive their way through the hot traffic. Having some basic Thai is recommended, as is being able to communicate your destination. Carrying your own helmet is highly advised, but most will provide one, if you ask. Basic language to learn: Go Left: Pj thngá Sái Go Right: Pj thngá khwa Straight on: Trng pj Stop here: Hyud trng ni Tuk-Tuk: A cultural emblem and still a somewhat reliable mode of transport in the heart of Bangkok. Flagging one down shouldn't be too difficult, especially around the tourist area of Siam. Prices will vary wildly and a 10-minute spin could set you back around 300baht. Sharpening up the bartering skills may be essential. Some hotels will have their own free Tuk-Tuk ready and waiting to drop guests at the nearest BTS/MRT station. You'll see the illuminated landmarks of Wat Arun and Temple of the Dawn, whilst being treated to a live band and an 80's/90's disco. Get to the ticketing office early because you'll need to find the company hosting your trip before being able to join the queue. If dining on the river appeals to you, but the boat doesn't, check out the riverside restaurant for some spectacular views and delicious food. Address: Thonglor - Exit 3 - BTS StationIf you love people watching, quality coffee and a slower pace away from crowds, then checking out the cafe culture in Sukhumvit's hip Thonglor/Ekkamai neighborhoods, may be precisely what you're looking for. Head to 'The Commons' (home to independent vendors, small events and creative workshops) and you will find Roof Coffee Roaster, renowned for excellent coffee and a community approach. Hop across the road to its younger brother, 'Seenspace', for Brave Roasters serving equally delicious coffee, plus craft beers. Whilst in the neighborhood, scoot over to Mocking Tails, a fairy tale cafe, making all your sweet tooth dreams a reality. With a dressing up box for the kids and an Instagram worthy concept, you'll have a magical time. Skip the main meal and go straight for the desserts—the Dragon's Fire Breath is a showstopper. One more cafe left in you? If yes, pop over to Ekamai and try Blue Dye, a house-turned-cafe. The owner exhibits and sells his own '(un) Fashion Vintage Collection' as well as products from other independent brands. If you're lucky, you may catch a chilled gig on the terrace. Website Trails of markets, a catcomb of never-ending alleyways, and a deep network of stunning street food vendors awaiting at every turn. Chinatown is the perfect jollity for explorers and adventurous taste buds. Pre-book a food tour and take advantage of one of the best street food districts in the world; you'll be introduced to the tastiest dishes on offer. Take the tour by night when the main drag bustles with locals and travellers grabbing a spot of dinner and the vibrant colors and delicious smells permeate the senses. Address: 299 Soi Charoen Nakhon 5 Charoen Nakhon Road Khlong Tom Sai, Khlong San Bangkok 10600Phone:+66 (0) 2 495 7000Website A shopaholic's dream come true', all under one roof. Be prepared to give up a full day as this place is an adventure palace sitting proudly on the bank of the Chao Phraya River. It spans seven floors to Michelin-star status and Netflix fame. Known for her crab omelette and its indulgently sized chunks of mouth melting deliciousness, chef Fai cooks up a storm right before your eyes. The Yellow Crab Curry has also made a name for itself and is the first inline to steal the show from its sister dish. This restaurant holds no heirs and graces, sitting on plastic chairs with only a fan to keep you cool simply adds to the unique charm of this culinary experience. Book months in advance to secure your place or rock up at 8 a.m., to place your name on a reservation list — then expect to wait in line for an hour or two for your 'allocated slot'. Address: The Continent Hotel Bangkok, 413 Sukhumvit Road, Bangkok 10110, ThailandPhone: +66 2 686 7000Website A restaurant located at the bustling Asoke BTS station and bolstered high up in the Continental Hotel. Famous for its free flow alcohol, pizza, and pasta, all freshly made to order. With a warm, yet casual atmosphere and hearty food with a great view, this unbeatable value will have you coming back for more. At THB999 per person, all that is left to do is decide if you're a 'Sundowner' (5:30 p.m. - 7:45 p.m.) or a 'Twilighter' (8:00 p.m. - 10:15 p.m.). Book at least five to seven days in advance and don't forget to ask for a window table for views of this sprawling city. Jason Michael Lang/Courtesy of Smokin' Pug Address: 105 Langsuan Road, Lumpini Park, Bangkok 10330Phone: +66 83 029 7598Website Popular for its tasty BBQ pork ribs consequently dubbed as "the best I ever tasted" by many of its visitors. A low-key restaurant with big portions, great beer, and a laid back, chilled out vibe, making you feel right at home. Email two days in advance of reservation or if you feel like staying home, download the FoodPanda app and order in. A small gem of a joint, easily missed if you don't know what you're looking for — check out the map and local landmarks before you go, to avoid turning up like a hot mess. Goda Sadzevicitve/Courtesy of AESOP'S Address: 120 Sala Daeng 1/1, Silom, Bang Rak, Bangkok 10500, ThailandPhone: +66 62 567 7751Website Famous for their summer-inspired cocktails, party atmosphere, and mouth-watering dishes, you're invited to 'do as the Greeks do'. Perfect for a lively family night out, a celebration, or a simple shindig with friends. Great music, lots of dancing on tables, and plate smashing to your heart's content. The Flaming Saganaki Cheese is a must try and the Hummus is to die for. Hidden in the heart of Silom, but accessible from SalaDaeng BTS station (Exit 2). Booking online before you go is essential. Address: 35/2 Soi Methi Niwet, Sukhumvit 24 Road, Klongton, Klongtoey, Bangkok, Thailand (Khlong Toei)Phone: 095-564-6053Website With six locations dotted around Bangkok, this is a family-run restaurant chain, offering Tam Vegan and gluten-free food. Passionate about debunking the 'vegetables are boring' myth, they present delicious dishes that lure in even the meat lovers. With so much to try, this place could end up being a firm favourite, especially for lunch. A great choice for wandering feet, as booking a table ahead of time is not really needed. Don't miss the Som Tam Thai or Green Curry Spaghetti. The desserts are utterly wonderful, being the 'Munky Monkey Ice-Cream & Cake' and any of the super delightful Waffle creations. Address: Sukhumvit 11 Alley, Khlong Toei Nuea, Wattana, Bangkok, 10110, ThailandPhone: +66 2 653 3900Website One of the oldest 'renaissance' pubs in Bangkok and recently relocated to the funky night spot of Soi 11. A Bangkok 'institution' built in a colonial 1920's style and based on the era and adventures of Hemmingway himself, it's a family-friendly restaurant by day and a sociable, lively bar by night. Bag a comfy sofa on the balcony and watch the theater of this vivacious street go by. Drop in anytime to try the home-inspired recipes, make it before 7 p.m., to take advantage of half-price alcoholic beverages. For Friday through Saturday reservations, booking ahead is a good idea. Address: 56/10 Sukhumvit Soi 55 (Soi Thong Lor), Bangkok, Thailand, 10110Phone: +66 (0)2101 2367Website Papaya Salad, Massaman Curry, Khao Soi, and the Soft-Shell Pad Thai are all great places to start when ordering dishes on this menu. The food here is authentic Thai and ordering a few plates to share is the best way to sample it all. A simple, affordable restaurant that's easy to find among Sukhumvit's trendy Thonglor area. Address: Asok Intersection, between Terminal 21 and MRT Sukhumvit exit 3 Bangkok, Thailand 10110Phone: 02 259 1228-9Website A very small Italian deli tucked away under Asoke BTS Skytrain station (adjacent to the ground floor of Terminal 21 shopping mall) and looking like a non-specific hole in the wall. Arguably, this is the best pizza in Bangkok with a perfect, crunchy sourdough crust, generous toppings, and tasty sauce base layer. Order a meter-long slab and you'll be enjoying it for days. A nice place for a couple to grab a table on the go... and the wine hits the spot, too. Sutthiphong Kongtrakool/Getty Images Address: Phra Borom Maha Ratchawang Phra Nakhon Bangkok 10200Phone: N/AWebsite Visiting the palace will realistically take a few hours of your time, depending on where you are staying and how you choose to get there. Give yourself between 60 and 90 minutes to enjoy the grounds and the stunning shrines—the Emerald Buddha is a must see. Showing up without booking is usually fine, or you can play it safe and book via the website one day in advance. There's a 500-baht entry fee and a very strict dress code, so be sure to cover your legs and shoulders at all times— for a small fee you can hire sarongs at the ticket office. Make sure to go early to beat the heat. Elena Levenets/Getty Images Address: 296/1 Moo7 Sukhumvit Road, Bangpooai, Amphoe Samut Prakan, Samut Prakan Province 10280Phone: 0 2026 8800-9Website The Ancient City is a large outdoor museum shaped to reflect the city of Thailand and dedicated to bringing lifelike, (with some smaller scale) representations of the country's oldest and most sacred buildings. All sites are geographically placed within the 320 acres of land and have been reproduced to reflect their original beauty and charm. A full day is necessary to cover the grounds, as is hiring a bicycle (or a cart buggy) upon arrival—and don't forget to look out for the Buffalos on your travels. This attraction gets busy and can get very, very HOT, so take plenty of water and a few snacks to keep you going. Choosing the coolest day from your schedule is advised. is also the main commercial and entertainment district. Home to expats and locals residing in the many high-rise Condominium and side street Soi's. Siam: Siam is the centerpiece of Bangkok (the old capital), a commercial district with plenty of shopping options and a hub for transport and entertainment. Siam Square is what gives Bangkok its nickname: City of Angels. A place of contrasts, vibrant art, and trendy hangout spots. Sathorn/Silom: A lively area with plenty of hustle and things to see and do. Whilst Silom covers the southside of Lumpini park and Chao Phraya River, Sathorn is perched on the edge of Silom and is mainly known for being the financial district. Chinatown - The oldest district in Bangkok and famous for its infusion of both Thai and Chinese culture. Known for its bright colors, historical temples, delicious street food, and walks that make you feel like you're really exploring the quintessence of Bangkok. Regardless of the time of year, Bangkok is always very hot and humid. A tropical 'year-round' climate means you will very rarely need a jacket, but you might need a Poncho. November through to March is regarded to be the cooler, less humid months. Saying that, temperatures can still soar as high as 90 degrees, especially as the days edge closer towards the hottest month of year, April. Bangkok is prone to sporadic showers of the year and guaranteed during the rainy season, where impressive thunderous storms will have you running for shelter. Throughout the whole year you can expect up to nine to 10 hours of daylight, with the sun setting between 6 - 7 p.m. The following are average Fahrenheit lows and highs by month: January: 70°F to 90°F (Cool Season)February: 73°F to 91°F (Cool Season)March: 77°F to 93°F (Hot Season)April: 79°F to 95°F (Hot Season)May: 79°F to 93°F (Hot Season)June: 79°F to 91°F (Hot Season)July: 79°F to 91°F (Monsoon Season)August: 79°F to 91°F (Monsoon Season)September: 77°F to 90°F (Monsoon Season)October: 77°F to 90°F (Monsoon Season)November: 75°F to 88°F (Cool Season)December: 70°F to 88°F (Cool Season) FoodPanda: Food delivery service.iOs | Android Grab: Private taxi service that works like Uber.iOs | Android Eatigo: Search by area for restaurant reservation.
