Finding Facts—Bongarri

By Mary F O'Callaghan

Bongarri was a strong legged emu. He lived on the Queensland plains between Winton and Longreach. There he scratched and pecked for food in the red soil under the brigalow trees.

Bongarri looked like a bundle of untidy feathers, but that did not worry him at all. He and his mate had a lovely round nest and there were ten dark shelled eggs in it. Bongarri sat on the nest, waiting for the eggs to hatch. He was a most contented it was Tamboola, the dingo, and he was on the prowl for food. Tamboola loved nothing more than emu for dinner. He was on the lookout for something now. Bongami had not seen him and he certainly had not heard him. Of this Tamboola was sure. So the dingo lay low, watching and sniffing. He knew the emu
